Dear General Cabell:

The inclosed letter, which is full of heartbreak and confusion, came to me this morning.

I haven't the vaguest idea as to what should be done with it; but since it may include some information which could be valuable to our country, I am sending it to you.

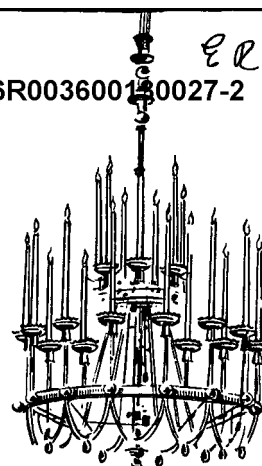

I can't imagine why it was sent to me in the first place, but the writer probably thought that our magazine might be able to help him. Of course, it can't.

Kindest personal regards.

Most sincerely,

Hope
